How to use Voyager Dangerous Cargo to manage

DANGEROUS CARGO

Please note that this is the first of three presentations, which should be viewed in order.

(VERSION 5a)

Dangerous cargoes are defined in Australian Standard AS3846-2005.

The definition for the purpose of shipping is broader than that used for land transport since some materials are only hazardous when shipped in bulk or they present a greater hazard in a marine environment as opposed to a land environment.

If you plan to move dangerous cargo through the port area, then you are obliged to give Fremantle Ports at least 48 hours notice. Presentation number 3 addresses the Notification process in detail.

Fremantle Ports has defined a category of dangerous cargo called high hazard dangerous cargo.

High hazard dangerous cargo cannot be moved through Fremantle Ports without permission first being granted by the Dangerous Cargo Officer. Permission is sought by filling in a Request for Permission form which is found in Voyager Dangerous Cargo. Presentation number 2 deals with the Request for Permission procedure.

Only after permission has been granted by the Dangerous Cargo Officer, will you be permitted to move high hazard dangerous cargo through the port area. As with dangerous cargo, the notification process must also be completed for all high hazard dangerous cargo.

You can also search by Storage ID, which in the case of a container would be the number stamped on the outside.

This would be very useful if a container was found to be leaking.

A simple search would indicate whether the container was carrying any high hazard dangerous cargo.

You can also search by Class, Packing Group (PG) or the dangerous cargo's Proper Shipping Name (PSN).

Remember that high hazard dangerous cargo cannot be moved through the port area, without permission first being granted by our Dangerous Cargo Officer.

In this case a Request For Permission form must be filled in and submitted.

These forms can be accessed in Voyager Dangerous Cargo over the Internet.

The Request for Permission form is covered in the next presentation.

THE END

There are three presentations in this series, which you need to view in order.
Presentation number 2 deals with how to submit a Request for Permission form over the Internet.
